OPENING OF FASHION WEEK A SUCCESS

STREETS CROWDED BEFORE WINDOWS TO SEE FIRST

HAINES HAD OPEN HOUSE

Price Furniture Store Popular Place Monday Night—Men's Wearing Apparel Shown Too

Despite the cold weather the fashion showeek opening was a success. Numbers of persons were on the streets before it was time for the curtains to go up and by the time the signal was given the streets before the windows were crowded.

Windows Lighted Beautifully

The Haines Store had open house. The windows as well as the store itself was beautifully lighted with red lights. The newest in spring goods wearing apparel, household linens and toilet accessories were temptingly displayed to the visitors. Mr. Haines himself in white serge and red tie greeted the guests at the door while all of the young women, who are employed at the store in white middies with red ties added attractiveness to the spring opening.

Bright Sashes

Suits of tricotine braided in attractive patterns, afternoon gowns in crepe, evening gowns in lace and satin combinations were shown. Bright colored sashes in gold and black, red and green, or in green and lavender, pink and blues may be had to brighten the gowns of more somber color.

Hosiery in white, gray, black and brown to match the slippers and boots tempted one to buy. Piece goods in chinchilla satin, crepe mandarin, will O' the wisp and Pussy willow satin were artistically draped on the counters.

Model Cottage

Another popular place with the folk last night was the Price furniture store. More than one young couple was seen visiting the model cottage on display. In this suit of rooms, the living room done in old rose and in Queen Anne furnished in mahogony, victrola being not the least attractive piece in the room. The easy chairs and divans in the Mulberry Velour made a comfortable place in which to live as well as receive company. The dining room was in Walnut of the William and Mary period. The bedroom was walnut also.

Convenient Kitchen

The kitchen had every electrical device that could be imagined to make housekeeping a delight. An electric range, electric iron, a Hoosier kitchen cabinet in white and a table with the white metal top made a sanitary place in which to prepare meals. On the kitchen floor as well as several of the bedroom floors congoleum rugs were used. The patterns were as pretty and artistic as though of Brussells or Wilton.

The Ashford, Dawson and Bon Marche Millinery stores had spring models in the windows. The Cushman Music Store demonstrated the Busch-Gerts Piano player.

Some Stores Not Open

While the other drygoods stores were not open they had attractive window displays. A dark blue silk elaborately embroidered in gray, blue red and gold thread was the most striking peice in the Eversole window. Georgette Blouses in taupe, bright green, white and other spring colors were shown. A touch of summer was added in the leghorn hats shown. The Yehle windows, which have not been completed had some of the spring wear on display. Blouses sweaters, and afternoon gowns were arranged in good effect. A black satin and lace combination for evening was perhaps the handsomest article shown.

Baby Shop

A typical baby shop was part of the display. Every thing from a rattle handpainted in water colors to the christening robe was there. The newest things in window draperies were on display in another window.

Organdies Shown

The Graham Store was gaily decorated with piece goods in organdies, which will be quite the vogue this summer. The Kuchs' Jewelry Store carried out the Easter note in the windows. A white cross erected against a dark purple background suggested the Easter season. In the other windows rosaries, prayer books and Bibles suggested Lenten meditations.

Men's Clothing Shown

The men's clothing stores were represented in the fashion show. The Tuxedo, which is rapidly supplanting the dress suit was on display. in Montgomery-Cummins', window Gloves, handkerchiefs and other fittings were attractively displayed. One of the Corwin-Murrin windows gaily decorated in bright crepe paper gave one an idea of what is proper in man's wearing apparel. The Montgomery Shoe Store had the latest in footwear. Straps were much in evidence in women's wear while the Cuban heel seems to have supplanted the high French heel, which has been the vogue for so long for dress.

Suits and dresses in tricotine for street wear as well as piece materials in orange shades were part of the Remus display, while small purple crosses each adorned with an Easter lily made the Raines jewelry store an attractive place to stop for a few moments.

947 VOTES CAST AT THE ELECTION

QUITE AN INTEREST TAKEN IN THE CITY PRIMARY.

MANY WOMEN VOTING

The Votes Will not be Counted Until the Polls Close—Curfman Was Leading?

The city primary election being held today is attracting a great deal of interest and at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon 947 votes had been cast. Many of the voters were women. It is expected the total vote will reach 1,200. The vote cast by wards is:

First ward, 161.
Second ward, 218.
Third ward, 286.
Fourth ward, 282.

The votes are not being counted as fast as voted as City Attorney Fred Harvey gave it as his opinion that the vote could not be counted until after the polls were closed. The judges and clerks in the various precincts were so notified this morning by Mayor Garrett and Mr. Harvey.

At some of the precincts, some of the early votes had been counted before Mayor Garrett and Mr. Harvey arrived. At these places at that time, Roy Curfman was running ahead of Fred P. Robinson, with Arthur S. Robey a poor third. It is being predicted that Curfman will be first with Robinson a close second.

There are several workers for each of the candidates for mayor, but probably more workers for Curfman and Robinson than for Robey.

The two candidates for mayor receiving the highest number of votes at today's primary will be the nominees to be voted on at the regular city election April 5. Charles F. Remus and Harry Mutz for councilmen have no opposition and will be nominated.

The pollis will not close until 7 o'clock. It is expected it will be 8 o'clock before any of the wards will report. The Democrat-Forum will receive the returns this evening and telephone calls will be answered.

Only one arrest was made today by City Marshal Tilton, it being Jim Conklin, Jr., who it is said, was intoxicated.

LARGEST CIRCULATION IN NODAWAY COUNTY

HARVEY'S MALICE TO CENTER IN ENGLAND.

There can be but one good reason for appointing George Harvey as Ambassador to Great Britain, and that is to continue abroad propaganda against the fame and work of Woodrow Wilson—propaganda begun by Medill McCormick and similar anti-Wilson personages before the war had ended. The Senate's "round robin" also served well in this partisan program, by way of informing Europe that the Senate would not agree to anything the President of the United States might favor in the Pence Conference. And now that Wilson is out of the Presideney, broken in health and probably forever out of active politics, personally at least, Harvey is to go to England that Britishers may be correctly informed as to the real status of Wilson among his countrymen!

Colonel Harvey does not possess a single qualification for diplomatic engagements, unless it be his thirst and his knowledge of rare vintages. He is cynical, sarcastic, usually insulting to those with whom he differs. He is sordid, low and commonplace in his conception of the American people and their mission in the world affairs. He is the last man in the United States who should be considered for any diplomatic appointment.

But he hates Wilson with a fervor rivaling even the malice abounding in the bosom of Henry Cabot Lodge. His hatred is founded upon the manner in which Mr. Wilson spurned his support, when he found that the Colonel merely wore the mask of friendship in order that he might better serve the interests who were then, as always, his masters. Mr. Wilson chose to do without Harvey's hypocritical companionship, because his path, he knew, would lead him far from the Colonel's natural environment. Since then, Harvey's spleen has known no limits.

Possibly the Republicans fear a reaction in favor of the Wilson policies, not only in the United States, but likewise abroad, hence they still pursue the former President, even in his retirement. They are doubtful as to whether their sabotage has been complete; what could be more fitting, then, than to send a Harvey to Great Britain? This must be the reason; there could be no other good reason.—Missouri State Journal.

The Story of Our States

By JONATHAN BRACE

X.—VIRGINIA

THE EARLY history of Virginia revolves about the name of Capt. John Smith. It was his indomitable spirit which enabled the settlement at Jamestown to survive the privations and difficulties that encompassed it during those first years. There in 1607 was made the first permanent English colony in America. The charter given by King James I to what was known as the London company, under whose auspices Jamestown and the later Virginia settlements were founded, designated that this colony should extend 200 miles north and 200 miles south of Old Point Comfort and stretch westward to the sea. Under the reign of Charles II it was considered such an important colony that it was called the fourth dominion of his empire, that is, England, Scotland, Ireland and Virginia. From this Virginia was often called the Old Dominion. The name Virginia itself means the virgin land and was so called after Queen Elizabeth, the "Virgin Queen." The early government of Virginia is of great interest. At first communism was tried, under which system the land and all property was owned in common and all profits were divided equally. This proved a disastrous failure. In 1619 the first real representative government in the colonies was established, called the house of burgesses, which continued in force under varying fortunes until Virginia joined the Union and became the tenth state in 1788. Much might be written of the character of the early Virginian settlers and their great influence on American life. From Virginia has sprung two other states, Kentucky and West Virginia. Even so, the state's present area is 42,627 square miles. Politically the Old Dominion state is entitled to twelve presidential electors. This is about the average of the southern states.

MORALS AND THE WAR

"Getting Gertie's Garter" is the title of a new play, and it is safe to predict for it great success, says the Sedalia Democrat.

"Its name is its fortune. A name like that is worth millions nowadays. Not so long ago nobody would have thought of giving a play such a title, but times have changed. "Getting Gertie's Garter" is a play-title perfectly typical of these times. It is a little more piquant than the average, and the alliteration helps it somewhat, but there are lots of others like it, and there are more than a few even more suggestive.

"The philosophers and the psychologists and the moralists and the ministers and the newspapers afford no satisfactiory explanation of the condition of affairs which renders a play-title like "Getting Gertie's Garter" not only permissible but exceedingly profitable. Any number of explanations are provided from these various sources, it is true, but the explanations are as wide apart as the poles. The most popular of them holds that the present moral slump, the most notable feature of which is a sharp decline in sex morality, is a direct result of the war. Thus Miss Lillian E. Dimmitt of Morningside College in Iowa, who is described as an authority on these matters, declares that the war has wrecked our ethical standards and that appalling immorality has resulted from the four years of slaughter. Miss Dimmitt, it appears, is inclined to blame the whole thing on the war, and there are a great many other people who take the same view of the situation.

"The war did many dreadful things to mankind, and perhaps its effect upon our ethical standards must be included among them, though it is almost certain that in this respect the war's sad aftermath did more damage than the war itself. But it is hardly fair to blame either the war or its aftermath for the very airy and filmy and flimsy state of mankinds's morals at present. Before the war came we were already headed along the path that we are now treading. The Louisville Courier-Journal has taken the trouble to go back to the old files of 1914 and it finds them full of discussions of the moral laxity then prevailing. It finds them full of references to tango teas, fast cabarets and lounge lizards; and, most interesting of all, it finds certain utterances of Prof. Hugo Musterberg of Harvard in which the learned doctor vied with alarm the terrible relaxation of moral standards and declared that nothing except the moral purification resulting from a great war could save the nation from complete decadence.

"We have had the great war—provided, as the Courier-Journal remarks, by Dr. Muensterberg's country men—but it does not seem to have saved us from decadence. Indeed, it is now considered by many persons to be the chief cause of our decadence. The thing which, according to Dr. Muensterberg, would save us is, accodring to Miss Dimmitt, the cause of our ruination. Dr. Muensterberg was wrong and Miss Dimmitt is wrong. But who is right? Who really knows the cause and the remedy."

Famous Clock "Strikes."

Braintree, Mass., March 22.—Braintree's famous clock, for which Mrs. Mary F. White donated $3,000 in her will filed in the Dedham court recently went on strike following the announcement that the money was to be used for the repair of the clock, "that it may keep good time."

The clock reposes in the towner of the First Congregational Church in Braintree.

BUSY BEES ARE FOOLED INTO KEEPING BUSY EXPERT SAYS

Deputy State Inspector of Apiaries Confides Information—Enlarge Hives to Make Work.

Chicago, March 22.—The secret of why the busy little bee improves each shining hour was revealed today by E. J. Bryant, deputy state inspector of apiaries.

He confided the information that bees only provided enough honey to keep them through the winter and that beekeepers fooled the bees by enlarging the hives. The bee, believing starvation is near, goes to work industriously to make more honey.

"We make the bees pay their board by working hard," Mr. Bryant said. "And to do that we've had to breed thoroughbred bees, get rid of the slackers and camouflage the hives so that the bees had the idea that their stock of honey for the winter was low. Then they dig just like the man who thinks his coal supply is going to run out before spring."

Honey is coming into more general use day by day as a substitute for sugar, according to Mr. Bryant.

MERRIMENT MARKS EASTER AT ROME

Impressive Church Ceremonies Followed by General Rejoicing.

The year's at the spring and Italy again celebrates Holy Week. It is principally in Rome and Venice that the sojourner's interest centers—about the historic plazas of St. Peter's and St. Mark's.

In Rome, if you would gain entrance into the great cathedral of St. Peter you must rise before daybreak. Only women will be allowed seats within the church this morning and to gain the privilege they must be veiled in black and wear garments of somber hue. Long before the hour for service the edifice is packed, hundreds of belated visitors being turned away.

At nine o'clock the papal regiment enters and makes room for the pope's guard, which, with other ecclesiastics, enters and takes up a position among the diplomatic corps. About 9:30 the music peals forth impressively, the soldiers present arms, and then the pope, attired simply in white, is carried in on his chair of state. As he proceeds up the aisle he blesses the devout congregation to the right and left.

At the close of the impressive service you are borne down the great aisles by the surging congregation and with them are belched from the doorways into the teeming plaza. There on all sides you hear cheery greetings in the musical Italian tongue and are more than likely to come upon every acquaintance you have in Rome.

The Jubilation at Its Wildest.

Pre-lenten ceremonies are elaborate. Maskers throng the streets throwing confetti and engaging in every form of jubilation, the young people having by no means a monopoly of the funmaking. All sorts of pranks are played and much horseplay indulged in, all of which is taken in good part.

Riderless horses are turned loose with fireworks tied to their tails to race madly down the corso. The closing revel is termed the "moccoletti" when everybody carries a lighted candle and each person tries to blow out the candle of his neighbor. Some carry bellows for this purpose and others use handkerchiefs and towels. The streets are a blaze of light and the festivities of the evening continue for about two hours. Then a bell strikes to signify that the carnival is ended, a cannon booms from the castle of St. Angelo and for six weeks thereafter the city is transformed into a scene of solemnity that is not broken until the dawn of Easter Sunday.

BARN ON ANDERSON FARM NEAR BEDISON BURNS MONDAY.

A barn on the Louis Anderson farm just west of Bedison, rented by Carl Larson, burned to the ground about 1 o'clock yesterday. It is not known how the fire originated nor just what the loss amounted to. The barn was not a large one but an Allen car, several farming implements and a considerable amount of grain were destroyed. There was no insurance. Mrs Larson had been in the barn a short time before and had gone to assist a neighbor, when the fire was discovered.

FOOLED JUDGE ELLISON

Blanchard Herald: Pat McElroy tells a good joke on himself, or Judge Ellison, we don't know which it was. Pat is industriously cultivating a crop of sideburns and "musn't touch it." He was down to Maryville last week, and while there called on Judge Ellison. The Judge was reading one of Pat's effusions in the Rock Port Mail and glancing up at the "stranger" who had just entered, said with a chuckle, "I was just reading some stuff by the Chicken Bristle correspondent of The Mail, a fellow named McElroy. It amuses me." "I know him," said Pat. "Is that so," questioned the judge, beginning to get interested. "Yes," said Pat, "I believe I am better acquainted with him than anyone in this world." The Judge took a long look at the "stranger" and then snorted. What he said was not complimentary to Pat's "disguise" but it might look just as bad in print as it sounded.

We Take the Risk Out of Raising Hogs

For less than a penny a day we guarantee to protect hogs against

DEATH FROM ANY CAUSE

Don't let your pessimistic neighbors say "it can't be done," for it has been done for over three years and will be done in the future.

Cholera is supposed to be the great bugaboo to all hog raisers. Yet as a matter of fact, not one hog in ten that dies from disease, dies from cholera.

WHAT OUR POLICIES COVER

Death From Any Cause—We insure hogs of any class or weight, and any age up to 4 years. Our rates on commercial hogs apply to any price from 10c to 20c per pound and periods of from six to twelve months, vaccinated or unvaccinated.

We issue a policy covering brood sows and boars of any value from $20 to $100, for six or twelve months, vaccinated or unvaccinated. Under the above classification the policy holder is entitled to FREE VETERINARY SERVICE at all times during the period of the policy.

Veterinary Service—By veterinary service we mean that it is ABSOLUTELY FREE when applied to hogs (other than registered) insured under our policies. The policy holder has only to report to us direct, any sickness appearing to be of a contagious nature, to get prompt action.

Policies on commercial hogs and breeding stock cover while being transported by wagon or truck to market, and while being moved from one farm to another. However, as soon as delivered to the railroad company the liability of the insurance company ceases. By this you may see that no permit is needed for removing an animal from one place to another for breeding purposes.

--- The Company That Pays Its Losses ---

The State Mutual Hog Insurance Company of Springfield, Ill., Organized on the Old Line Plan. You Pay Straight Premium—No Assessments.

This is the greatest protection that has even been offered to the farmers of Missouri, in protecting their commercial hogs and brood sows against disease or accident. You write us a letter and we will call on you and explain more fully our insurance. The company is all right, we are all right, and you will be all right and safe in insuring your hogs with us at less than one penny a day against death from any cause.

The packers claim to use every part of the hog except the "squeal," and they almost succeed in doing that. To you the "SQUEAL" is very important; it is your guarantee of a live hog. "WE SAVE THE SQUEAL."

We have the exclusive right to write this kind of insurance in Nodaway county. We will call on you and give you insurance or a fuller explanation.

Come in and talk it over, or drop us a card and we will call on you.

WE ARE IN OUR OFFICE EVERY SATURDAY.

MAE GIRACI

Of all the kiddies who are playing before the camera little ten-year-old Mae Giraci is believed to be one of the most fortunate, for this screen lass is "doubling" for Priscilla Dean in a characterization that shows Miss Dean as she looked at the age of ten. Little Mae started work in the "movies" at the age of six. She was born in Los Angeles and is of Italian parentage.

Illinois Boy in Role of Nathan Hale at Cantigny.

IS SILENT UNDER THREATS

Lieutenant Kendall Refused to Betray Plans of Army, Enabling United States to Win Its First Battle—Decoyed to German Line, Falsely Accused and Then Executed—Secret of Solitary, Unmarked Grave Is Finally Solved—Scion of Old Family.

How an American officer, an unacclaimed Illinois boy, played the part of Nathan Hale in the World war, dying as a spy that the first serious offensive of the A. E. F. might be crowned with success, was told in Chicago recently for the first time. Its narration was made possible by the discovery of an unmarked grave behind the lines once held by the Kaiser's forces at Cantigny, and an investigation following the discovery of the body of an American lieutenant in the grave.

When America entered the war, one of the first to offer his services was Oliver Julian Kendall, son of an old Illinois family for which Kendall county was named, and which still resided in Naperville, west of Chicago. Young Kendall entered the first officers' training camp and was commissioned first lieutenant shortly after the death of his father, Frank Kendall, former mayor and superintendent of schools in Naperville.

The young man had been connected with the engineering department of the Chicago & Northwestern railroad, and his experience led to his being attached to the engineers of the First division and sent to France.

Commands Advanced Party.

On May 25, 1918, the First division was about to attempt the first important offensive in which American troops had been engaged in France. The struggle was to prove whether the despised American troops could cope with the crack troops of the kaiser. This was the situation when Kendall took his place in the jumping-off trenches directly in front of Cantigny and in command of the advanced party.

As he waited noises came from No Man's Land calling for a volunteer. Kendall and a private started to investigate. They had not gone far when the noises grew louder. Ordering the private to remain where he was, Kendall went forward. He was never seen again.

That night the German raiding parties, seeking information, attacked the jumping-off trenches. The men who held them were alert, and when the Germans were repulsed several Prussian officers were left behind as prisoners. From them it was learned that an American lieutenant had been captured in No Man's Land shortly before the raid.

Reported Missing in Action.

Colonel E. J. Kierkesson, commanding the First engineers, wrote to Kendall's family that the young man was missing in action. That was all at the time. Then gradually the story of Kendall's fate became known. In May, 1919, Maj. Gen. C. P. Summerall, one of the commanders of the First division, was told of the finding of the lone grave in the area that had been behind the Prussian lines in Cantigny, which had been captured in the first great American victory, two days after Kendall disappeared. The body found there had been removed to the American cemetery at Bouvillers, France. It was later identified as that of Kendall. From German sources it was learned that, although he was in full uniform when captured between the lines, Kendall had been shot as a spy. The German officers suspected he could tell them about an American offensive which was about to take place. When he refused, he was shot.

The official records and the report of the Red Cross finally have reached Mrs. Frank Kendall, mother of Lieutenant Kendall, at her home, 4927 Washtenaw avenue, Chicago.

PREFERS JAIL TO HIS WIFE

Husband Elected to Serve Year in a Prison Rather Than Live With Her.

In preference to returning to his wife, whom he was accused of assaulting, John McHarg of Jersey City, N. J., elected to serve a year in the penitentiary.

Mrs. McHarg said her husband came home drunk and attacked her. McHarg denied the assault. The judge told the defendant he usually sent wife beaters to the penitentiary for a year, but that if McHarg would promise good behavior he would put him on probation. McHarg, however, stated he would rather spend a year in jail than go back to his wife.

RACE HAS GROWN PHYSICALLY

Proof That the Famous Heroes of the Middle Ages Were Smaller Than Modern Men.

Physiologists, after having measured hundreds of skeletons, testify that the men of our own time average from one to two centimeters taller than the men of the Middle ages. We possess their armor, and we not only appear to have grown taller as a race since the time when the armor was made, but our shoulders could never fit inside the steel corselets of our medieval forefathers.

Of the supposedly enormous strength of those historic warriors we have no proof beyond the weight of the equipment. The harness of the knights was very much lighter than has commonly been supposed. According to one of the catalogues of the Museum of Artillery, the weight of the complete armor did not, as a rule, exceed fifty pounds, and inasmuch as those who wore it were horsemen, it was the horse that had to bear the greater part of the burden.

Man Her Downfall.

An old colored woman stopped in a local oculist's the other day to have her glasses fixed. They were bent and broken. Her head was tied up and she looked very much the worse for wear. Naturally the oculist was anxious to hear what sort of trouble she had been in, so in putting her glasses on for her, he jocularly remarked, "Now, Mammy, you can see that man of yours all right." "See a man nothin'," she replied, "that's how I fell down now, looking at one in the hotel."—Indianapolis News.

HAD NERVOUS BREAKDOWN

Mrs. Ireland Permits us to Publish this Letter for the Benefit of Others Who Are in Her Condition

Warsaw, Missouri.—"For five years I was weakly, nervous and in a run-down condition. Then I had a nervous breakdown and doctors said I would never be well again. I can't praise the Compound enough and will recommend it to all women. You may publish this letter if you think it will help others."—Mrs. FLOYD IRELAND, R. R. 1, Warsaw, Missouri.

Nervous women are both ailing and wretched, and with a nervous breakdown all joy goes out of a woman's life. It is said that the ills peculiar to women act on the nerves like a firebrand.

LOVELIEST OF ALL EASTER FLOWERS

In the Candidum Lily Southern Europe Has the Finest and the Oldest.

Lilium candidum, a native of southern Europe, was introduced in 1596, making it the oldest lily in cultivation. It is not only the loveliest of lilies but the hardiest of the white lilies.

Great quantities of candidum lily bulbs are grown in the warm climate of southern France, and these bulbs planted in the autumn do not stand severe winters well, while bulbs from northern France can be depended on to thrive in our climate if properly treated.

Ben Jonson referred to the madonna lily when he asked: "Have you seen but a whyte lillie blow?" Maeterlinck said of it: "The great white lily, the old lord of the gardens, the only authentic prince among all the commonalty issuing from the kitchen garden, the ditches, the copses, the pools and the moors, among the strangers come from none knows where, with his invariable six-petaled chalice of silver, whose nobility dates back to that of the gods themselves—the immemorial lily raises his ancient scepter, august, inviolate, which creates around it a zone of chastity, silence and light.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

Pagan Traits Remain.

Complete separation of Christian festivals from the pagan celebrations that preceded them has proved difficult. Our term "Easter" is strictly pagan, for example, being named in honor of the ancient Norse goddess of Spring, Ostara. The term "Lent," is derived from the old Saxon word Lencten, signifying spring, and the festivities of the carnival period are no doubt a persistence of the festival spirit in which our pagan ancestors used to celebrate the return of spring. All these things seem to bear out the declaration of Ulysses: "I am a part of all that I have met," for in spite of centuries of civilization some of the pagan traits of our prehistoric ancestors still abide with us.

All Have Significance.

Lovers of flowers may be interested to learn that the entire Episcopal church calendar may be counted in bloom from the Candlemas lily to the Glastonbury thorn on Christmas day.—London Tit-Bits.

Having traveled 500,000 miles without the payment of a cent for steamship or railroad fare, Frank Clark, a globe trotter, has arrived in San Diego, Cal., where he is preparing for a journey through Mexico. Clark arrived in San Diego from New York city, having made the trip across the continent in two weeks.

Forty years ago, at the age of sixteen, Clark was a newsboy on the Bowery in New York city.

"It is easier to get along in Europe," Clark said, "than in the United States. Over there a fellow who is broke can sit on the steps of a palace and nobody will bother him. Let a wayfarer here light a fire at some cross-road and the town constable will kick over his stewpan, draw two guns on him and the judge will give him 30 days."

IV. THE SPANISH COLONIES AND INDEPENDENCE.

During the Seventeenth and Eighteenth Centuries, in spite of bad government, the South American colonies made some growth and progress. Men of English blood, who have always been quick to resent and resist every form of tyranny, would not long have endured Spanish misrule. The colonies were not developed for their own good, but were constantly exploited for the benefit of Spain.

The colonist was supposed to be entitled to the same rights and privileges as the Spanish citizen, but this was often mere theory. The form of government was despotic, and, administered by greedy and inefficient officials responsible only to the over-sea authorities, it was usually oppressive. The hated Inquisition was established, and, as its revenue was derived from confiscations, cruelty and injustice were common. The economic policy was unreasonable and repressive. Monopolies were granted, offices sold, and heavy taxes collected in such a manner that most of the commercial transactions were tainted with fraud. There was jealousy between the Spanish and native officials, and even the native-born Spaniards were seldom allowed to hold positions of importance. Up to 1810 there had been 160 viceroys and 68 captains-general and governors and presidents, and of these only eighteen had been native colonists.

In 1780 insurrections were brewing and the next year 15,000 armed men attacked Bogota, shouting "Long live the king, but death to bad governors." As the English colonies were in revolt Spain was apprehensive, and sought to prevent liberal ideas from reaching her own colonies. However, the success of the revolution in North America encouraged the South Americans, and even many of the priests organized secret societies and gave their approval of the revolutionary program. Then, too, there had been protracted commercial competition between Spain and England, and the Spanish had permitted Dutch, French and English to occupy many of the small islands, which were used as centers of propaganda. During the Napoleonic wars Spain and England were enemies, and England captured many Spanish ships and possessions. Certain British attacks in South America occurred, and the colonists were left to take care of themselves, and thus acquired experience and self-confidence. When Napoleon dominated Spain, the Latin Americans refused to recognize his authority and united with England to resist. Thus independence from French usurpation was first secured, and with the taste of self-government the colonists were not long in freeing themselves from the almost helpless government of Spain. To be sure, the revolutions were not bloodless, as there were royalists in the colonies, but various dauntless leaders, such as Miranda, Bolivar and San Martin, organized in first one and then another of the States, and, after different but similar movements, succeeded in establishing autonomous governments. Peru, the center of Spanish power, alone gave allegiance to the king, and finally revolution succeeded even there, when, in January, 1826, Callao, the last Spanish stronghold, surrendered.

Brazil, under Portuguese rule, had a different history. In 1807, when Napoleon attacked Portugal, the royal family took refuge in Brazil and set up their court. Thus Brazil became a monarchy, the only one that ever flourished in America, and under a fairly progressive policy prospered. Later, when King John returned to Portugal, his son, Dom Pedro, became regent, and the Brazilians, fearing the loss of prestige, sought and obtained their independence, and on October 12, 1822, Dom Pedro was declared constitutional emperor, and in 1825 Portugal reluctantly acknowledged Brazil's independence.

Among the notable incidents of the revolutionary period was the participation of Bolivar and kindred spirits in the movements in several different states. General Bolivar, one of the most picturesque characters of the century, assisted in the liberation of Venezuela, Colombia, Ecuador, Peru and Bolivia, and then devoted his remaining years to an effort to unite these states into a great federal republic. The greatest of their liberators, Bolivar holds among South Americans the position of Washington in his own country, although, because of his ambitions and desire for power, he is more like Napoleon. The people almost worshiped him, and he was always able to attract to himself capable subordinates. While he was cruel and sensual, he was also generous and brave. While he was an ardent democrat, yet as an opportunist he was willing to use monarchy to secure democracy. At the close of his life he declared: "I blush to admit it, but independence is the only benefit we have achieved, and that has been at the cost of all others. Our constitutions are books, our laws papers, our elections combats, and life itself a torment. We shall arrive at such a state that no foreign nation will condescend to conquer us, and we shall be governed by petty tyrants." How unfortunate that his dream of a great federal republic, composed of Venezuela, Colombia, Ecuador, Peru and Bolivia was not realized! Is such a consummation yet possible?

Governor Arthur M. Hyde was in St. Louis yesterday and last evening made a speech, opening the campaign for Mayor Kiel for a third term. James W. Byrnes, Democratic nominee, who is making his campaign on a non-partisan and non-political basis, with a pledge of business administration sent to Gov. Hyde this letter:

"Dear Sir: Will you be good enough in your speech tonight to reconcile the opposition which you expressed last summer against the entire city machine, including Mr. Kiel, Mr. Wecke, Mr. Goldstein and Mr. Schmoll, with your present effort to save them from oblivion?

"Will you please explain why the Governor of the State of Missouri interferes in a local matter in an effort to set up politics against a business administration? Will you state your position on the question of home rule, which has been advocated for many years?

"As you are opening a local machine campaign, no doubt you will be willing to express fully to the voters your interest in the matter?"

Hyde, in speeches made in St. Louis last July, shortly before the State primary, attacked his opponent, E. E. E. McJimsey of Springfield, for his alliance with the St. Louis machine. McJimsey received the Kiel-Schmoll support. Hyde declared that if he were nominated and elected, he would "be Governor, and not let the bosses in St. Louis and the bosses in Kansas City run the job." One of the meetings at which Hyde spoke was an anti-Schmoll meeting in Schmoll's ward, the Thirteenth, in the interest of the house-cleaning movement and of C. E. Mohrstadt's candidacy for Sheriff.

PAUL HEWITT, WHO ATTENDED COLLEGE HERE, IN TROUBLE.

Paul Hewitt, who attended the State Teachers College during 1916, has been arrested in Kansas City on a charge of stealing a cab. At that time Hewitt was attending the college here his home was in Chillicothe. According to a Kansas City paper, Hewitt is said to have told the detectives that he and the other two, Dan Cavanaugh and Bernard Shaner, stole a Chandler car at Euclid and Linwood avenues on the night of February 23. This car, he said, was taken to Randazzo's garage. Four days later, Hewitt said, he saw Randazzo remove an "1" bar from the Chandler and attach it to a Hudson car owned by Randazzo. Then, at Randazzo's suggestion, the boys took the Chandler from the garage and abandoned it at Twenty-seventh street and Grand Avenue. The name of the owner did not appear in the confession made by the boys.

Dr. and Mrs. W. B. Heryford of Maryville visited the James McGinnesses of Bedison last Sunday afternoon.
